

Residents asked for their say on new Strategic Plan for the Greater Nottingham Area

Residents, organisations and businesses are being asked to have their say on the Greater Nottingham Strategic Plan to help shape future planning for the area.

Councils are required to set out strategic policies to address local priorities for development.

Broxtowe, Gedling and Nottingham City Councils and ourselves are developing a joint Strategic Plan, which sets out the policies which will help guide future development across their combined areas.

The plan will look at how Greater Nottingham's longer-term development needs can be met up to 2038 supported by more detailed policies which will be developed in each Council's own individual Local Plan.

It will outline the approach to meeting housing need and includes housing targets for each Council area based on the Government's standard methodology.

Residents have until the consultation period ends on February 14 to have their say on the plan.
